000 Spirit. The missionaries exhausted themselves in vain in the 17th
797 century in trying to inculcate in them the principles of Christianity and several were massacred on the island of St. Vincent, so that by the beginning of the 18th century they had given up converting them. The Caribs sometimes let themselves be baptized because for them it was an occasion for celebration and drinking, in addition to which the governors or the principal inhabitants of the French islands took pleasure in serving as their godparents and showered them with gifts; but hardly had they reached home then they forgot all the instruction they had received. "The reason for the small success of the missionaries in the conversion of the Caribs," says Father Dutertre, "is the unfortunate impression which the life of the Christians had made on them, strewn with cruelty and exhibiting habits more barbaric than 771 those of the islanders." Today the remaining Caribs are Catholics, like most of the blacks of Dominica and their chief has even placed a portrait of the Pope in a conspicuous place in his house. French
[793] priests serve as their pastors and there existed at Salybia, the principal [346] settlement of the territory, a little church which was blown down by a cyclone and which they are engaged in /143/ rebuilding. Next to it is the only school in the region, attended by young Caribs and young mestizos of both sexes.

191 The Caribs of Dominica are truly polyglot; they speak the French patois with the blacks, which is the same in this island as in Guadeloupe and Martinique; they know a few English words which they use in their relations with officials or various merchants; finally, among themselves, they still make use of a certain number of words of their ancestral language, a language which includes, as we have already seen, two idioms, one spoken by the men, the other by the women.

115 One of my colleagues, born and long since settled in Dominica but of a French family and having pursued his medical studies in France, Dr. Daniel Thally was kind enough to give me a Carib vocabulary which he collected in 1916 and 1918 from an old native woman, the daughter of Jean-Baptiste and Marie-Louise, named 197 Rosalie who was between 75 and 80 years old. This vocabulary, 192 carefully studied on my return to France with the learned collaboration of Dr. Rivet, allowed us to recover from it some words of the Carib vocabulary of the Antilles as it was in the time of /145/ Father Breton (1), who has left us a grammar and a dictionary of this
